

I am concerned about the status of a couple of radio stations which serve my area by way of FM Translator frequencies. K-Love, which is a network broadcasting positive, encouraging, Christian, programming across the nation, which we in the Clarksburg WV area, receive on 91.9 fm. Also, in this same area, we receive West Virginia Public Radio, which broadcasts news, classical music, etc. This programming we receive at 107.3 fm. Both of these sources of entertainment, news, and in general, thought provoking programming, are not available on any other outlets in this area of the nation.

My concern is that if Low Power FM stations are given precedence over what we already have, we will certainly ill served. If LPFM is to be a reality, it should only be used to enhance what we already have, not knock viable, useful stations off the air, in the interest of diversity. Diversity is only good if it adds choices, not takes away. Please keep the FM Translator stations already in service to the public, in the Clarksburg,WV area, and in other areas across this country, in service as they are.
